

MY
TO A POETRY AND PLATO

Please, I have had enough of this drive.
It more and more becomes
the road we must not travel.

I have had enough of practice,
when I practice how to practice;
now I must retain the light
that served once to attract us.

To be sure the shadow in the cave
is as real as the fire that makes it.
But turn we must to the path of day,
and not just look, but take it.
